

Hello and thank you for taking comments from citizens such as myself. Putting into effect the proposition that would give LPFM priority over national services would simply be a mistake. Any programing that is well recieved enough to be broadcasted nationally is most likely worth listening to. Especially if it is totally funded by those that listen to it. No advertising, no federal funding, nothing. One such nationally broadcasted service is "Air 1." Its staion in my area is one of the few that is completely clean, positive, and family friendly. This is the kind of programming any community should be glad to have in its area. I personally leave my radio tuned to it by default, and it not being available to me throughout my day would be more than a disappointment. So if you want to expand LPFM a little for whatever reason, that's fine by me. But don't give that expansion the potential to take away what so many people around the nation have come to love.
